Vice Chair for Addiction Medicine

The Department of Family Medicine seeks an experienced primary care leader to head a growing and nationally recognized addiction medicine program dedicated to excellence in training, scholarship and clinical care at the Jacobs School of Medicine and Biomedical Sciences (State University of New York at Buffalo). The Vice Chair for Addiction Medicine will:

- Lead efforts to integrate addiction medicine in medical education and training.
- Coordinate and expand clinical addiction medicine services in the Department of Family Medicine and support such efforts in other departments.
- Direct an addiction medicine research and training program focused on translation of evidence to practice.

The Department of Family Medicine includes one of the first accredited addiction medicine fellowship programs, which operates in conjunction with a family medicine residency program that is one of the nation’s oldest and largest. The Department also is heavily involved in medical school curriculum.

The Vice Chair will be responsible for an Addiction Medicine Section that staffs the chemical dependency unit at Erie County Medical Center as well as a dedicated addiction medicine community practice whose patients include a substantial number of pregnant women. The section also staffs a local methadone program, a residential detox and stabilization facility, an adolescent treatment center and a free-standing faculty private practice office, and the unit has been expanding activities with justice-involved populations. Research is well-integrated into the educational and clinical missions – the Vice Chair is a key member of the UB Primary Care Research Institute and collaborates with the nationally recognized Research Institute on Addictions.

The candidate will have a strong record of scholarship and experience as an addiction medicine clinician/educator, with administrative skills in operation of an academic unit.
