Comprehensive Care Practice Recruitment

The Johns Hopkins Department Medicine at Johns Hopkins Bayview Medical Center has an outstanding opportunity to join the Division of Chemical Dependence. This Division has a busy outpatient practice that provides primary care with a focus on caring for individuals with substance use disorder and HIV infection. Faculty also cover an inpatient unit dedicated to treating withdrawal and provide addiction medicine consultations for the inpatient services. Faculty work closely with Addiction Medicine fellows and are involved in teaching medical students and residents. There are also numerous opportunities for scholarly activity in collaboration with faculty in the division and other departments of the Schools of Medicine and Public Health. The position may include faculty appointment at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine at the rank of Instructor or Assistant Professor. There is also the option for an outpatient-only clinical associate position. Interested individuals should apply to Debbie Blunt (dblunt1@jhmi.edu).

Candidates should be: board certified/board eligible in Internal Medicine, have MD license or be expected to apply for MD license, board certification in Addiction Medicine is strongly encouraged, waivered to prescribe buprenorphine (have a DEA X number), have experience with caring for patients with SUDs, and be dedicated to excellent clinical care and teaching. We are an equal opportunity employer and all qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability status, protected veteran status, gender identity, sexual orientation, pregnancy and pregnancy-related conditions or any other characteristic protected by law.
